ABOUT PORTER HEAPS

The artistic distance between the organ music on a network radio daytime serial and guest appearances with the Detroit Symphony is great, yet Porter Heaps covers it with ease, hitting all of the musical bases in between.

Here are some of the highlights of the music assignments he has handled:

He has appeared before 10,000 professional and church organists and organ teachers on behalf of one of the largest organ makers in the world. For the same company he's discussed the fine points of organ playing with audiences composed of amateur organists.

Each Sunday, however, Porter generally manages to get back to Evanston, Ill., where his home is and where he plays organ for the choir in his church.

In addition to the concerts that he finds time to play, Porter also makes phonograph records, composes and arranges and teaches.

His background includes all of the degrees you'd expect. He says, however, that the most thrilling phase of his education was the time he spent under the tutelage of the great French organ master, Marcel Dupre.

Also high on his list of artistically satisfying experiences is the making of this series of phonograph records, all of which he recorded on the magnificent pipe organ in the studios of radio station WGN, Chicago.
