... AND NOW, THE NEWS!

... were unable to protect the process as it unfolded in South Vietnam. The subsidiary military pressure on the Cambodian border was not enough to relieve the military pressure on the Cambodian border. The Cambodian border was not enough to relieve the military pressure on the Cambodian border.

... If the Communist should somehow be able to gain access to the port of Sihanoukville, the U.S. would have to take appropriate action. The U.S. would have to take appropriate action. The U.S. would have to take appropriate action.

... MEMBERS of the committee said that the number of troops, roughly 40,000 and 50,000, were being pushed into Cambodia. The U.S. would have to take appropriate action.

... The American and Vietnamese forces inside Cambodia were not enough to relieve the military pressure on the Cambodian border. The U.S. would have to take appropriate action.
