To Marshall, Hilda, and Kenny - Thanks for delivering, understanding, believing, and realizing that we're a late inning winning ballclub.

A special thanks to Frazer Smith, who took care of some heavy phone jones, vitamins, Malted Soy Bean Drink, sushi and letting me borrow one of his cars to complete this destiny project. I'm going to let him have my unlisted home phone number.

"I see Los Angeles as the most powerful and relevant geographical magnet in the U.S. today, pulling the artistically inclined, the really relevant people, the drifters (those sensitive enough to go with the pull), the individual minds, the poets and philosophers within the city limits. L.A. is to the U.S. what the U.S. is to the rest of the world. THE WEST IS THE BEST, and it attracts the best people. It's the closest you can get to the sun, then you're stopped by the sea. Across the sea and it's into the East — into religion, not individualism. L.A. is the last frontier. L.A. is for people who are not afraid of being alone, people who are involved in a search of one sort or another, always intensely personal for people who are not afraid of being alone, people who are involved in a search of one sort or another, always intensely personal Into the 1980's L.A. is gonna be a real trip, a trip in the adventursome sense. I think people really are gonna discover themselves, because of that pursuit for happiness, peace, and purpose, they're gonna discover it within, not outside. But, with the wisdom of the 60's, and the ambiguity of the 70's, the awakening this time will be much more real and much less vulnerable than it was in the summer of love. I see a lot of people coming of age emotionally and spiritually in the 80's... the result will be incredible creativity, incredible activity, divergent forms of expression, all right-on, because it will be the outcome of a personal quest. The art will be so realized and passionate — religious in the sense that it will be part of each person's own mission, accompanied with the joy of discovery, a discovery of god. The discovery of self. The west is the best, people, and here, and YOU do the rest."
